WHAT IS THE EXPENSE
FOR YOUR FREEDOM?

The "cost" of Freedom has already been expended through consent, compliance, submission based upon FEAR.

ABOUT CULTURAL CONTRARIAN

All efforts to prevent being doxed eventually get trounced. You can call me Mr. Miller, CC, and Ryan.

My Passion

My Passion comes from above and is a private conversation and is the basis from where I stand, how I walk and how I proclaim. Living out the Doctrine of the Lesser Magistrate in a Durbin'esque stretch against my carcass to "love thy neighbor".

My Mission

It is rooted in my Passion, but in the world my priorities are as follow:

Relationship priorities:

- Creator
- Spouse
- Daughter
- Family
- Friends
- Acquaintances / Strangers

My Mission (Secondary) -

to use the combination of my Passion, gifts and talents, to engage with fellow humans about how to stand on truth in honor and respect, not fearful of the flesh from the persecution from evil doers. I seek no justice, but will abide by our justice system.

CHAPTER 1

Cost?

After the signing of the Constitution, Benjamin Franklin was leaving Independence Hall. A citizen approached Benjamin Franklin and asked:

"Dr Frankin, What do we have?"

Benjamin Franklin quipped "A Republic if we can keep it."

What was paid for by others.

Hopefully we are united with a degree of understanding regarding the events which formed the Constitutional Republic form of Government regarding the United States of America.

It is not reasonable to assume that all readers have the same base of knowledge regarding the formation of the United States as a Constitutional Republic and the background of significant events in our country's history.

We all have various degrees of either public or private education and our own depth of personal study which has enhanced that education. We either believe what we were told, or went on a journey to determine the truthfulness of what we were told.

It is not my intention to enter into a laborious, deep dive on what happened with the Indigenous peoples, various treaties, the formation of our justice system, the civil war, Jeckle Island, the formation of government agencies. The countless, what would be termed conspiracy theories, (Project Mockingbird, Panama Papers, cusip, Defense Authorization Act, Department of Homeland Security, NASA, NHS), that list can go on forever (Election Integrity, rogue public servants, blah, blah, blah.)

My point is to not get distracted by the countless shiny objects and get sucked into the Kubuki Theater debate of politics, media, psychological warfare, and strive to get to the core issues that we have control over and is US.

I am hopeful we all can agree, that our Freedom from England was purchased with the blood of others desiring to be Free from the oppression, taxation, restrictions imposed on colonists from England.

I also hope that regardless of the events, (the circumstances between the Blood shed in the past, and events up until present) we are now more oppressed than we were when the colonists rebelled.

If we cannot agree on that point, there is no reason to continue flipping the pages. I would respectfully submit that disagreement with that point is possibly a firm grasp of an ideological position, for whatever reason you might want to explore, and is not predicated upon evidence and possibly could embrace redefinition or meaning of words.

Il hope we can agree that the Boston Tea Party's actions were primarily driven based upon non-consent to a 2% tax back to England on commodities and we have been conditioned to accept an oppressive governmental mandate to extract more and more money from it's citizens through taxes, permits, certificates, licenses, bonds, insurance, etc. Our collective participation in our current society is predicated upon our consent, compliance, submission and obtaining permissions from those in authority through Intimidation, Threat, Coercion, Duress and Violence.

Expense

I use the word "Expense" for a specific reason. Expense in this context is what "I" an individual must spend or pay, to claim the Freedoms which were enumerated in the constitution.

Here is another instance which I don't want to get into the weeds philosophically with anyones particular understanding of the Constitution, the Bill of Rights, Amendments, Statutes, Law, Codes, Case Law, Supreme Court Precedent, the 3 Branches of Government [absent of grappling down that two other branches exist (press and We The People), arguably another (Corporations/Elites)]. The level of understanding civic's should not be assumed to include the authoritarian structure in which we have been conditioned to live, and that "accountability and transparency" should never be "expected" and mandatory compliance is pushed onto us and resistance is futile.

SILENCE IS CONSENT – EXPECT ONLY THAT WHICH YOU LAWFULLY DEMAND

I want to create a metaphor to help illustrate what I submit is what we have all been conditioned to accept.

Imagine that our Government is established to maintain order, assist in the health, welfare and safety of those who live in the US and to protect everyone from the unlawful actions of those who would cause harm or trespass against others. Now, the government uses its authority through taxation, and representation to formulate legislation and laws to be the guardrails of a civil society. All of those in public service, have an elevated status, special privileges and benefits to use a Samurai Sword of influence, to keep us inside the guardrails of a civil society. I specifically identify a Samurai Sword as it has only one sharp edged blade.

But in my example, those in authority have convinced citizens that they have the Samurai Sword. But our Founding Fathers actually created a different type of Sword which has two sharp edges, that we all have the ability to claim and grab ahold of the double edged sword.

One side of our sword can absolutely injur ourselves if we don't train and practice in using a sword. But our Government structure puts the sword in our hands, to use (metaphorically) against the Government.

LAWS – CUT BOTH WAYS

For We The People, ignorance of the law is not a defense against the enforcement of law, in a court of law. We have allowed that standard to be acceptable because We All are ignorant. Ignorant is not a bad word, it merely means "lacks knowledge". We have been told to "trust" those people who have the knowledge, or hire those who have the knowledge to "re-present" you. The Double Edged Broadsword are the Laws or Common Law to hold our Public Servants and the Government accountable.

Just consider this for a minute. Our Government has told us we are ignorant, and we will tell you when, where, what, how much and we are expected to trust and obey. Am I wrong?

We are a merely biological sacks of goo no different than any other human on this planet other than the time and location of our existence. I could drone on for pages of what we have willingly consented to without resistance. Let me make this cuttngly clear.

Just because we couldn't intervene and discuss an alternate option to airline security, we have accepted standing in lines, having our items scanned, partially disrobe, and be obligated to submit to physical groping (some times a degree of sexual assault) all in the name of safety. Nobody objects, resists, uses their free speech. Heads are bowed as cattle move through check points for the convenience to fly.

We don't know that the right to be secure in our person, papers, property and effects has been invaded through the SCOTUS ruling of Terry v Ohio. Where an officer "should" articulate "probable cause", in practice, they seize citizens under a claim of "reasonable suspicion".

Law Enforcement have no "legal/lawful" duty to defend or protect the lives of any private citizen, and the safety of law enforcement results upon citizens giving up their safety in submission to the officers priority of safety.

Frazier v Cupp in practice provides the ability for public servants to misrepresent, mis-state, mischaracterize (never called a lie and rarely perjury) to private citizens.

But those in disagreement with these statement would be arguing against the way things "should be" or called the spirit of the law. But the debate isn't with me, and needs to be argued at the Supreme Court.

Silence = Consent

This is probably the most cognitive dissonance dome crushing statement and unfortunately it's gonna get harder. I completely apologize for where this is going to take you, but I am taking you there in love. (Love Thy Neighbor - eBook)

BELLIGERENT COMPLAINT (FORD V SURGET)

This might sound completely contrary to what you may have been conditioned to believe, or told on how to conduct yourself in the face of authority. But before I tease this apart I want to make a slight departure and give some biblical reference point.

Romans 13 Interpretation - Obey the authority

Many have been taught scripture which claims that those who claim Christ are to obey those in authority, for God ordained authority. But, the missing piece which can be gathered through expository teaching is that the role in which God has ordained obedience to authority is when the authority is to protect the governed/ruled from the actions of "evil doers". But what does God command of his children when encountering "evil doers"?

I don't want to dive into the depths of biblical commands, but merely ask for personal reflection, what if those in authority are "evil doers"?

- Don't cause another to sin?
- Call someone to correction or rebuke?
- Turn and give your other cheek?
- Extend mercy and grace in truth and love?
- Demand justice? (really?)

I personally avoid discussions on the way things "should be" or debating the intentions, or the unclimbable slippery slope of SCOTUS precedent in action. I lean on dealing with what "is" and either live with what is real, accept it, resist it, or participate in changing what is.

*If our complaint isn't belligerent
"enough" you are consenting.*

- Who gets to determine what is belligerent enough, before risking violence?
- What is the objective standard for belligerence?
- What am I expected to belligerently object to?

CHAPTER 2

Who are you really?

Are we chameleons which change colors subject to the group of people we navigate through life?

Can our yes be a yes and a no be a no?

Do we even have a drive or desire to be consistent in who we are (words and actions) to that which we claim to be?

Are we logical, critical thinking, sound reasoning humans or are we something else?

Gut Check

The chapter questions were intended for you to simply come to your own determination about that character of "you".

But, from my worldview, I am super critical of myself, and routinely fail (in words/actions) to live hypocritically in who I claim to be and the contradictions which will certainly be drawn to my attention through words and actions. (Of which I always remain open to a brothers correction).

I have developed my own basis, regarding my role "in" this world, (my systematic theology), which works for me. I just encourage others to silently claim their source to either strive towards truth or accept that seeking truth is not a priority.

I respectfully request that you do not assign judgement from me if you embark that personal self analysis and I harbor any opinion as to ones on destination. I prefer to be open to private conversation in this domain.

Now I want to provide some clarity to the "Expense" or "Investment". Expense comes down to Time and Money.

PRICE – QUALITY – AVAILABILITY

Most of us have an understanding of the you can only pick (2) from the Price/Quality/Availability sales and marketing pyramid.

- Availability/Quality - Then don't be concerned on how much it will cost.
- Price/Availability - Then don't be concerned on the quality of the product/service.
- Cost/Quality - Then don't be concerned on when you are going to get the product or service.

In our own lives, in the running of our households, we subconsciously make these decisions or even have conversations regarding our own behavior.

You need to buy a new refrigerator today? You run to Loews, find one in stock that meets your needs and you take it home. Or, you are willing to wait and have that sub-zero delivered in 3 months which matches your kitchen decor.

We do the same things regarding our diet, exercise, consumption of food, alcohol, tobacco, octane of gas, brand of oil, store we choose to buy groceries, phones and apps we purchase, on and on and on. These sound nonsensical as they are completely a function of ones personal choices, comfort, projected image, social standing, or self soothing (comfort).

Where are you going?

I wanted to establish a framework for the reader to equate their own interest, involvement or even engagement to how Free someone is and if Freedom is even desired and that consent is totally acceptable. I hesitantly am dropping a string of cliches.

- The definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again, and expecting a different result.
- Never expect someone to do more for you, then you are willing to do for yourself, absent of incentive and recognition.
- If you pay nothing for something it has the exact value you paid for it.

Allow me to return to the premise that Freedom is something we must Stand In and On. Proclaim it, claim it, and live it. Also we must also acknowledge that doing so is a very dangerous proposition absent of having the knowledge which is the foundation to build courage to safely stand Free.

One cannot establish being Free for someone else. It is ours individually to claim.

CAUTION: Never attempt to object to an order, claim, demand (even if it is unlawful) until you know the risk and consequences. Shouting, "I am protected by the Constitution" is a meaningless protest, for that 'protection' is predicated upon you knowing how to claim and assert those protections.

THE DECISION IS YOUR – (PRICE – QUALITY – AVAILABILITY)

Price + Quality- If you don't want to spend anything, you have unlimited time to figure it out on your own and establish your own criteria on the quality of figuring out how to be Free. Just don't hold out a false expectation that you or your grandchildren will be Free.

Price + Availability - If you have a sense of urgency, and a forecasted budget to learn, you can spend little money and consume videos, listen to SCOTUS rulings, read legal documents, figuring it out as your budget allows. Maybe direct a portion of your budget to gain materials from those who can help you learn more quickly.

Quality + Availability - If you desire good information and an accelerated path to consume it, then invest in that learning. If you have conditions on how you want to learn (don't want to read, want podcasts or videos), then you might have a self imposed limitation on how fast you are willing to consume.

What Cultural Contrarian Provides.

I am a unique human who is completely willing to admit and acknowledge my strengths, weaknesses and challenges. Right out of the gate, I produce content, but am horrible at editing (that's a neuro divergent disability). Right now, I am a creative enterprise of 1 relying on the support of others.. Hopefully that will change, but the market will drive that, not me.

My process is designed to meet people where they are, and this is just an invitation for you to be aware of the process and to see if the Cultural Contrarian is a benefit to you.

Spreading the Love

My wife has come up with a funny and appropriate label for, me as an AuADHD, which I submit is a valid identifier. She shared this with her best friend Kristi and Kristi said, "Yea, what's your point?" If you have listened to me speak, present, broadcast, or even write, you might pick-up that I could be easily labeled a "whack-a-doodle". Regardless of your interpretation (ability/disability) I say yes.

From my worldview, I firmly stand with a mission to acquire the knowledge to be obedient to 1 Peter 3:15. I stand on the same foundation to refine my discernment as I sharpen the point of my sword seeking Truth. I often say, on the path of accumulating knowledge, eat the fish and spit out the bones. I have developed my own path to define, identify, discern and proclaim something to be True.

My own independent path of knowledge acquisition has been learning from the gifts, talents, passions and presentations by others (books, podcasts, videos, etc).

My reference list of those I consume is extensive and I just share a few that I have valued over the years.

It began over 30 years ago with my Bride. But the others have a spot too.

Youtube Channels

I am not sharing these channels in any promotional nor endorsement capacity. I believe we have the opportunity to learn from all types of individuals. Regardless if we are not 100% in agreement with who people are or how they conduct themselves. As I list these out, it is in no order of hierarchy or priority, just a host of people who have been an influence and enhance my learning.
